ALMOST A YEAR AFTER SANDY HOOK MASSACRE, MOTIVE REMAINS UNKNOWN

Reuters

NEWTOWN, Conn. Around the time of the massacre of children at an elementary school in Connecticut last December, gunman Adam Lanza was living an isolated existence, communicating with his mother only by email even though they lived in the same house.

Along-awaited state's attorney report on one of the worst mass shootings in the U.S. revealed few new details Monday and left relatives of the 20 children and six adults killed with no more knowledge about Lanza's motive. But the report on the Dec. 14 shooting rampage at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn., described Lanza's "obsession with mass murders," especially the shootings in 1999 at Columbine High School in Colorado.

Lanza also was fascinated by firearms, and investigators found a check from his mother to buy a pistol as a Christmas gift, according to the 44-page report.

It portrays 20-year-old Lanza as a troubled man who "knew his conduct to be against the law. He had the ability to control his behavior to obtain the results he wanted, including his own death."

The report mentions people who encountered Lanza describing him as someone who had a dry sense of humor and enjoyed nature, and others said he was a recluse.

Lanza killed his mother, Nancy Lanza, in their Newtown house before attacking the school and ended the rampage by turning his gun on himself. Investigators said there was evidence that Lanza planned the shootings, but did not discuss his plans with others.

No criminal prosecutions will be brought, the report said.

"The obvious question that remains is: 'Why did the shooter murder twenty-seven people, including twenty children?' Unfortunately, that question may never be answered conclusively," the report said.

The investigation, which included a search of the Lanza home and interviews with those who knew him, did shine some light on Lanza's state of mind at the time.

Lanza, who had been estranged from his father and older brother for about two years, kept a spreadsheet of mass murders that included information about each shooting.

INSIDE THE SCHOOL

The report does not name the 20 children killed, address the content of the emergency calls made from the school or describe witness testimony about what was seen and heard in the classrooms where the killings took place. Connecticut passed a law earlier this year that said some evidence from the state's investigation will never be made available to the public.

Lanza would not allow anyone to enter his bedroom, refused to sleep in hotels, reacted badly to loud noises, disliked Christmas and birthdays and liked to play a video game called "Dance Dance Revolution" in addition to more violent fare.

Tapped out on holiday gift ideas? Here are a few CTA token trinkets that harken back to the days of yore, the '90s, when riders could use tokens or magnetic stripe cards to pay their fares. The CTA eliminated tokens in 1999, while the magnetic stripe card, a mainstay for nearly two decades, was slated for climination Dec. 15 before it won a reprieve thanks to problems with Ventra.

STATIONARY

A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Lake Red Line

Next up: Central Green Line

What's up, Mr. Popular? The Lake Red Line station in the Loop is the most visited rail station this year through August, according to CTA data. The station, which beats out the entire Pink and Purple Line ridership this year, narrowly edged runner-up Clark/Lake by 46,500 riders. The difference is that the Clark/Lake station has multiple platforms while the Lake station is jammed with rush-hour riders, some of whom were displaced when the Washington Red Line station closed seven years ago and others enjoying a new perk this year: free transfer from the Washington Blue Line. That transfer used to cost 25 cents.

YOU GOTTA WORKFOR SWEATER

By Mick Swasko | REDEYE

Justin Koehneke bought out as many ugly Christmas sweaters as he could within a 10-mile radius and intends to give them away for free. Sort of.

Koehneke, 30, of Lakeview, posted a Craigslist ad Monday advertising his intention to give away 10 super-cheesy Christmas sweaters for those who intend on bar crawling Dec. 14 at Twelve Bars of Xmas.

But he has a list of demands first.

"Can't find any ugly Christmas sweaters at your local thrift shop?" his ad asks. "Well, I'm the jerk that snatched them all up. I could flip them on cbay and make 30 bucks a piece but instead let's make this a little interesting."

How interesting? Two free sweaters go to a couple who act out the scene from "Saved by the Bell" in which Jessie takes caffeine pills and Zack must console her. One free sweater goes to anyone who can beat him in a 60-meter speedwalking race. Another free sweater goes to anyone who buys a winter coat, some hand warmers and Froot Loops for Koehneke's favorite Streetwise vendor. You get the idea.

Koehneke said he's completely serious and thought the idea was more fun than just simply making a quick buck on eBay.

"It's just my sick, twisted head, I guess," he said. MSWASKO@TRIBUNE.CDM | @SWASKO

Some of the busiest travel days of the year have arrived, Chicago, and our city's two airports will play a prominent role as people fly in and out of the city. Chicagoans who fly often enough have learned to love their airport, whether it's O'Hare or Midway. Which is better? We've compiled 10 reasons why O'Hare is better than Midway and 10 reasons Midway is better than O'Hare. Which one do you like better? (Be forewarned: Some RedEye staffers swing both ways!)

HOT DATE SUNDAY

That is expected to be the holiday weekend's busiest travel day at Chicago's airports, according to the city's Department of Aviation. About 212,000 travelers will come through O'Hare and more than 80,000 passengers will travel through Midway. The city expects more than 1.9 million passengers to travel through the two airports between Nov. 25 and Dec. 3. LEONOR VIVANCO, REDEYE

Catherine Garypie demonstrates how she is able to pass through CTA turnstiles on occasion by swiping her federal identification card.

IDs fake out Ventra

CTA expects quick fix to Ventra's latest fare-payment problem

Chicago Tribune

Catherine Garypie, a federal employee, pulled a card out of her purse and swiped it recently at a Jackson Blue Line turnstile. The Ventra fare reader turned green—Go, it read. But she didn't.

Garypie was demonstrating how, for the third time in three trips, her federal ID card—which isn't linked up to any accounts-tricked the Ventra system into thinking she'd paid a fare.

She discovered the glitch Thursday night when she inadvertently swiped her ID, instead of her Ventra card, which she keeps in the same pocket of her bag. In a hurry, she walked through the gate.

"There was nobody around, so I thought, well, I'm in a hurry, so I just went home," Garypie said. "I thought it must be a fluke."

After testing it again Friday morning, she told a CTA manager and her employer, the Environmental Protection Agency, about the problem. The EPA sent employees an email, alerting them that their work IDs can sometimes trick the CTA's Ventra fare card system.

"Please be advised that intentional misuse of federal credentials is prohibited," the email read, in part. "We are grateful to the EPA employee who reported this matter."

The federal ID card appeared to admit passage about 1 in every 10 swipes.

EPA spokeswoman Anne Rowan said the agency was working with the CTA to fix the problem Monday.

CTA spokesman Brian Steele said Monday that the issue with the EPA employee card is "the first time we have seen something like this. We don't believe there are any other in-

HOW IT SHOULD WORK

When a Ventra card is tapped on a Ventra reader aboard a bus or at a rail station turnstile, the reader receives information from the card and determines within 2.5 seconds whether the card is legitimate-either a Ventra card or a debit or credit card that has the radio frequency technology-and approves or denies entrance. The Ventra card information is also sent to a computer system at a remote location to check the balance on the card and deduct the proper fare.

stances out there."

He said the CTA expected to fix the problem by the end of the day Monday. Cubic Transportation Systems, the California company that developed and is managing Ventra for the CTA under a $454 million contract, "is already installing a system modification to mitigate the issue," Steele said.

Same-sex couple gets an early marriage license

Chicago Tribune

A same-sex Chicago couple will be allowed to marry this week after a federal court ordered that the Cook County clerk immediately issue them a marriage license, officials said.

Vernita Gray and Patricia Ewert will be issued their license seven months before the state's gay marriage bill goes into effect because one of the women is battling terminal cancer, attorneys said.

The court decision was made Monday by U.S. District Judge Thomas Durkin, and County Clerk David Orr said he would comply:

"As a supporter of same-sex marriage, I'm pleased Judge Durkin granted relief to Patricia Ewert and Vernita Gray in this difficult hour," said Orr in a statement.

"We're very happy for this ruling for this couple," said John Knight, a director of the LGBT Project at the ACLU of Illinois, "We understand that this is an incredibly important right for all same-sex couples. ... Ms. Gray is simply too ill to wait until June to marry."

4 indicted in Ohio rape case

5 STEUBENVILLE, Ohio A grand jury has indicted the superintendent of schools in Steubenville, Ohio, on charges that he obstructed an investigation into the rape of a drunk teenage girl at a party in 2012, Ohio Attorney General Mike DeWine said Monday.

The grand jury also indicted an elementary school principal, an assistant wrestling coach and a former volunteer assistant coach for the Steubenville football team, DeWine said. The indictments were handed down Friday and filed Monday, he said.

The rape case drew national attention to Steubenville, a town about 40 miles west of Pittsburgh, after a photo and video that appeared to document the assault of the 16-yearold girl were posted online. In March, two high school football players were found guilty as juveniles of assaulting the girl in August 2012.

"This was very tough work; none of it was easy," DeWine told a news conference, adding that the grand jury's work was done, barring any new evidence in the case.

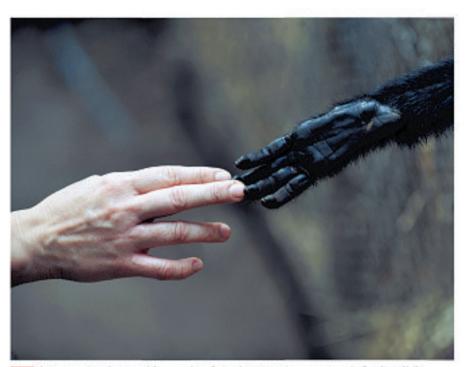

Superintendent Michael McVey, 50, was indicted on two counts of obstructing justice and one count of evidence tampering, all felonies, and misdemeanor counts of making false statements and obstructing official business, DeWine said.

A secretary at the superintendent's office declined to comment on the indictment and said the school board planned to meet later on Monday to discuss the matter.

Matthew Belardine, 26, who at the time was a volunteer assistant football coach, was accused of four misdemeanors; obstructing official business, misleading a public official, allowing underage drinking and contributing to the delinquency of a child, DeWine said.

Seth Fluharty, 26, an assistant wrestling coach and special education teacher, was indicted for failing to report child abuse or neglect, a misdemeanor, as was Lynnett Gorman, 40, an elementary school principal in the district, he said.

No gunman found after Yale lockdown

BOSTON Yale University lifted a lockdown Monday after a police search of its campus in New Haven, Conn., found no evidence of a gunman, despite an anonymous caller's claim that his roommate had headed to the Ivy League school to shoot people.

"This is so far an unconfirmed report," said David Hartman, spokesman for the New Haven Police Department. "We have not identified a suspect in this case."

No one was injured and no shots were fired at any time during the incident, Hartman said. He added that police now believed that a witness who reported seeing a person carrying a gun most likely had seen an armed police officer.

The department received an emergency call at 9:30 a.m. from a man on a pay phone near Yale University who stated that his roommate was en route to the campus "with the intention of shooting people," Hartman told reporters.

DOUBT IS THE WORST ENEMY NOW

This is not "The Return" that Bulls fans were hoping for.

Ten games into his NBA comeback after tearing his ACL in April 2012, Derrick Rose returned to the operating table Monday after damaging the meniscus in his right knee Friday A torn meniscus was the "best" worst-case scenario for Rose with regard to his "good" knee, but it's still another surgery, another intensive rehab, and now, another lost season for Rose and the Bulls.

It seems unfair for a guy-who seems to be a good person both on and off the court-to have to go through a second knee surgery in just over 18 months. After four years of wowing us with his otherworldly athletic ability, his body has begun to betray him and it's not wrong to wonder if he'll ever be the same-not just from an athletic standpoint, either.

Rose will still be able to play basketball, run fast, jump and dunk after all this, but it's hard to imagine with the way he plays and the injuries he's sustained that he'll ever be confident in his body the way he once was. The same way we all were.

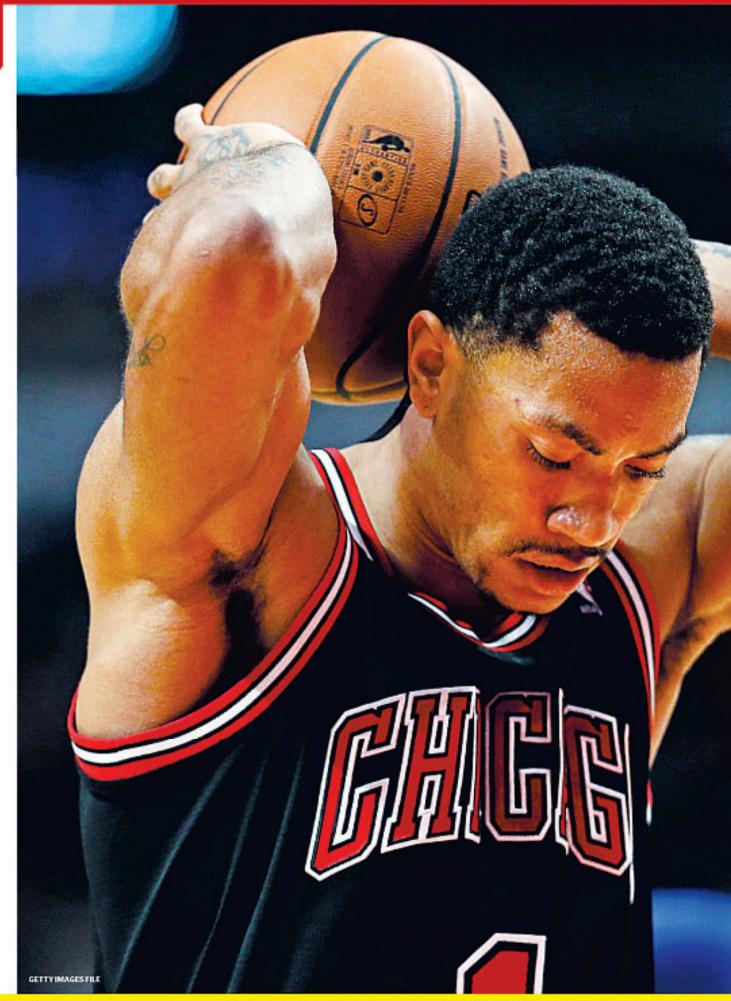

The sobering reality is that no matter what he says publicly, there will always be doubt floating around somewhere between the back and the front of his mind, and it'll reflect in his game.

He has dictated the direction of the franchise since he was drafted, and this situation will be no different. Now that he's officially been ruled out and will miss his second straight season, the Bulls' championship window, at least for now, has closed. And the end of Luol Deng's time wearing a Bulls uniform may be coming sooner rather than later.

But the saddest scenario of all is the Rose Era in Chicago may now be over.

Hometown kid leads hometown team to an NBA championship would've made for a great story. It's just too bad his knees didn't cooperate. Now it's a story that may never be told.

See you in 2014, Derrick Rose.

The Bulls superstar will miss the rest of this season after undergoing what the team described as successful surgery Monday to repair the torn medial meniscus in his right knee.

That means Rose will have played in just 50 games over three NBA seasons. He missed all of last season after left knee surgery to repair a torn ACL. He battled through four separate injuries during the shortened lockout season in 2011-12.

"Sometimes with athletes in sports, luck has a lot to do with it," Luol Deng said. "It's just bad luck, It's not going to change anything, He's still going to be Derrick. He still is going to work hard and come back even better. I really believe that he was better coming back from that ACL. It's unfortunate that it happened. I have no doubt he's going to come back and play great."

"Like Bulls fans everywhere, I was beartbroken when I heard of Derrick's injury," Bulls chairman Jerry Reinsdorf said in a statement. "We are happy to know that, according to his doctors, his surgery was successful, and in time, Derrick is expected to make a full recovery. Everyone at the Bulls knows firsthand how extremely hard Derrick worked to return to the court this year, and I have no doubt he will do the same with regards to his recovery from this injury."

When Rose does return, he will do so to a substantially different Bulls team.

Knowing Rose was returning from left knee surgery, the Bulls kept their high-priced core of Rose, Carlos Boozer, Luol Deng and Joakim Noah intact for one final championship run this season. Well over the luxury tax line, the Bulls face tough decisions regarding Deng, who is an unrestricted free agent next summer, and Boozer, a candidate for the amnesty provision.

The Bulls won a first-round playoff series without Rose last season with a gritty bunch that featured shot-creators Nate Robinson and Marco Belinelli. The Bulls' major offseason addition, Mike Dunleavy, is a space-the-floor shooter specifically designed to fit with Rose.

And now Rose is gone-again.

"That's there," coach Tom Thibodeau said. "We can use that as an excuse if we choose. But no one is going to feel sorry for us. We've got enough in that room to get it done. So we've got to turn it around [Monday]. We've got to come out with an edge, we've got to be ready to play defense and rebound. That's the way we're going to win. We're capable of doing that."

Rose suffered the injury Friday night in Portland, Ore., on a noncontact play cutting to the basket.

The surgery was performed at Rush University Medical Center by Bulls head team physician Dr. Brian Cole and team physician Dr. Chuck Bush Joseph.

ALL ABOUT THE MENISCUS

Femur

WHAT IS IT?

The meniscus is a piece of cartilage that cushions the knee joint, protecting the bones and helping prevent overextension of the knee. Each knee has two: the medial and lateral menisci.

WHY DOES IT TEAR?

Sudden twisting or other movements that may occur from sports or related injuries often results in tears. These types of injuries are more common for people older than 30.

HOW IS IT FIXED?

Surgery isn't automatic, nor is it always effective. Generally small tears require rest while acute tears and highly athletic people will need an arthroscopic procedure. Chronic meniscus ailments usually don't respond to surgery.

NOTE: Drawing is approximate.

LONG ROAD AHEA

Derrick Rose had the torn medial meniscus in his right knee surgically repaired Monday morning. Now what? The Tribune spoke to medical and rehabilitation experts with AthletiCo, the preferred provider of physical therapy for the Bulls, for an outline on the rehab process for patients who have the surgery Rose underwent.

Two weeks: Patients wear a knee brace up to this point.

Four weeks: Patients usually can bend the knee a bit more.

Six to eight weeks: Patients are weaned off crutches.

Three to four months: Weight-bearing exercises focusing on strength and range of motion begin.

Four months or later: Sport-specific rehab begins.

What scares you most about Derrick Rose's Injury?

How much I was willing to wager in all those bets on how the Bulls would dominate this year.

That it's the other knee. With his playing style, two bad knees could be trouble. Me and him are both too familiar with the pain. How many times the date will change for "The Return: Part Deux." Someone at Adidas is already planning a re-return campaign.

The next time we see Derrick Rose on the court, he'll be ... ... wearing a sad face like Bulls fans but also his latest pair of sneakers out on the market. .. one injury away from entering the Sam Bowie/Greg Oden zone ... running, cutting and jumping with his created player on Xbox One. .. wearing two bionic knees and it will be the future. The FAR future. ... a lawyer.

Why are the Bears committing so many penalties lately? To lower Bears fans' expectations so that when they play well, we are really wowed. Trestman thinks the neutral zone is customs between U.S. and Canada. They still haven't adjusted to the violent murmurs Trestman releases when they mess up. They heard about my new drinking game: Every penalty = 1 shot. I'm still wasted. Unresolved inner demons.

How can the Bears fix their run defense?

Tackle and stop runs like it was: your job. Oh wait, it is. Then, do your job. Probably just prayer at this point.

Dollar Store pantyhose have a better chance against the run. So, I don't know. Make our guy run with the ball naked. The lanes will open. Nobody wants to tackle that. Nipple tape is usually the best run defense.

Jon Bon Jovi wants to buy an NFL franchise, Discuss.

is it only so he can get paid performing every year for the Super Bowl halftime show? A rock star with a team in L.A. would make a lot of sense. As the only hair band to survive the '80s, his Illuminati credit rating is solid. Well, that Philadelphia Soul arena team won some championships .. are the Bears for Seems like a terrible idea but it's his life.

This may be why David Otunga works with his shirt off. The Chicago-area native and WWE Superstar—and Jennifer Hudson's fiance—is on the cover of the December issue of Muscle & Fitness magazine. Otunga said his physique does have its drawbacks, however. "I was on HLN recently and barely fit into the dress shirt I had tailored for me," he said. "They made it too tight. It hardly fit around my neck and once I was in it, I couldn't move my arms. I couldn't get it off afterward, so I just ended up ripping the back to get out of it." TRIBUME

Call of Duty: Ghosts

The 10th in the annual military-style

first-person shooter is far from a bad game-there have been worthy improvements that include a survival mode against aliens, a new class of weapons and a nifty slide move that would make Starlin Castro jealous. But "Call of Duty: Ghosts" lacks the comph of last year's spectacular "Black Ops II," which featured branching storylines and some memorable multiplayer maps. It's almost a shame that battling paranormal spectres "Ghostbusters"-style isn't part of "Call of Duty: Ghosts." It might shake up a series which is beginning to feel, well, dutiful,

Legend of Zelda: A Link Between Worlds Mintendo 305

Sure, Nintendo's been mired in a nostalgic fog lately, with nearly every major release too often drawing from the familiar well of Mario, Zelda and Donkey Kong. But if the result is as good as "The Legend of Zelda: A Link Between Worlds," the Japanese gaming giant can keep cranking out more old hits than a wedding DJ. A guasi-seguel to the 1992 Super Nintendo classic "A Link to the Past," "Worlds" is a Zelda game that lets green-clad hero Link return to his old two-dimensional self while granting him a handful of cool new tricks. like the ability to become a drawing and creep along walls. It's proof that familiarity doesn't always breed contempt.

Knack PlayStation 4

Sony clearly ran out of ideas for a fresh kid-friendly mascot to accompany its new PlayStation 4. The best way to describe the star of "Knack" is as a walking and talking pile of magic junk. OK, they're called relics-small pieces of energy-packed debris-but still, there's nothing very endearing about the creature. You're tasked with guiding Knack as he takes on a host of goblin invaders armed with rockets and tanks. Most of this is accomplished through punching, more punching and ... did I mention punching? Repetitive and clumsy, it's clear that the developers didn't have the Knack to make a great game, gyan swith is a product special contributor.

Nick Offerman tucks in to a delicious Thanksgiving meal

Chicago Tribune

In his new book, "Paddle Your Own Canoe: One Man's Fundamentals for Delicious Living," Nick Offerman-the former Chicago theater actor, comedian and native of Minooka, Ill., now best known for his hilarious performances as the red-meat-eating, Scotchdrinking libertarian Ron Swanson on NBC's "Parks and Recreation"-is alternately facetious and stone-cold serious about food.

The real-life Offerman, 43, is devoted to organic food unadulterated by preservatives, antibiotics, hormones and other additives. And, of course, he is a fan of Thanksgiving.

Most Americans celebrate Thanksgiving with a big meal, the centerpiece of which is typically a certain species of poultry. I gather from your book that you are not a big fan of # poultry; you are a red-meat guy. So I'm going to put you on the spot: What do you usually have for Thanksgiving dinner?

When I go to my dad's house, he is quite amazing at cooking a turkey, both in the oven and on the grill. Sometimes he'll throw one in the deep fryer as well. So if I do eat poultry, I prefer to do it from my father's hands. And maybe there'll be some pork chops on the side.

Where will you be at Thanksgiving this year?

We've both been traveling way too much the last couple of years, between acting jobs and touring—me as a humorist, [wife] Megan [Mullally] with her band, Nancy and Beth and we've seen a good deal of our families, so I think we'll be taking the holidays off. We're going to stay home and take a nap.

Do you have a menu in mind this Thanksgiving?

We have a friend who's an amazing chef, and when we're in town, we usually have Thanksgiving at her house and I bring my signature dish, which is called Corn My Way. It has an ellipsis after "Corn," so it's "Corn ... My Way." I scrape the ear of corn so that I glean all of the liquid and pulp from inside the kernel, so you get everything but the skin. You end up with this incredibly sweet vellow corn juice, which I then simmer down to the consistency of a smooth mashed potato. I add a little bit of butter and a little fresh chives, and you can almost serve this stuff for dessert. It's always a big hit.

It sounds a lot like creamed corn.

It's not dissimilar to creamed corn. But I'm a creative person, so I had to come up with my own name.

The recipe for 'A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving'

Chicago Tribune

Sometimes the smallest notion can create magic.

The 1973 animated special "A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving" was based on a "very simple idea," said the show's producer Lee Mendelson. Charles M. Schulz, the creator of the beloved "Peanuts" comic strip, "said I wonder what it would be like if kids did Thanksgiving dinner and the chaos that would ensue. That is what it is all about."

"A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving" premiered on CBS on Nov. 20, 1973, and has been a staple on TV ever since.

ABC's Mark Bracco, vice president of alternative series and specials, believes the Charlie Brown specials, which began with 1965's "A Charlie Brown Christmas," have endured because they "resonate with viewers." In an email interview he noted, "The kids that watched them a generation ago are now watching them with their own kids. Today's parents have made the Charlie Brown specials a part of their own holiday traditions."

Stephen Shea, who was a little boy when he voiced the role of the philosophical Linus, is still surprised at the reaction he gets when people learn he was part of the "Peanuts" gang.

"I don't walk around saying 'I'm the voice of Linus,' "Shea said. "But when people find out one way or another, they scream 'I love Linus. That is my favorite character!' "

"A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving" is back this Turkey Day paired with a bonus cartoon from Schulz's 1988 "This is America, Charlie Brown: The Mayflower Voyagers," which finds Charlie Brown, Snoopy and the gang experiencing the first Thanksgiving in 1620.

1832: Public streetcar service began in New York. The fare: 121/2 cents.

1975: A federal jury in Sacramento, Calif., convicted Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, a follower of Charles Manson, of attempting to assassinate President Gerald Ford.

2000: Florida's Republican secretary of state certified George W. Bush as the winner over Al Gore in the state's presidential balloting by 537 votes.

LIL MAMA'S SPACESUIT DRESS

This is nothing compared with what she wore during her performance with TLC. From the front, it ALMOST has a Maleficent vibe, but the back is just all kinds of alien farts.

We got the

TAKING A CLOSER LOOK AT THE AMERICAN MUSIC AWARDS RED CARPET

JENNIFER HUDSON'S HAIRCUT

When we first heard she'd lopped off her locks, there was a collective "nooooood." But this chop is totally doing it for us. Let us never doubt you again, J. Hud.

OSBORNE'S 'DO

This is cool in theory, but up close you can just see way too much of the rigging keeping everything together. Also, ain't no way that braided bun is made from Kelly's hair. You've got the cash, now work on the color matching.

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Miley brought the Interwebs catz, Katy brought the questionably racist attire and R. Kelly and Gaga brought the Oval Office sexcapades. And that's just what you could see during the regular American Music Awards broadcast on Sunday night. Fortunately, we've got the inside scoop on the real details of the red carpet—sartorially, of course. We have no actual secret RedEye red carpet gossip sources—maybe next year? DAMORANGERIBBURG.COM | GREDEYEDAMA

DICTIONARY PURSE

Drew Barrymore probably wants to add this to her dictionary collection. Also useful in case Katy needs to look up the definition of "geisha," or throw the book at someone.

Four letters: D. G. A. F. When we look into Ke$ha's eyes, we cannot find traces of a soul. But "Die Young" is just such a spectacularly great song that surely it was worth whatever deal she made with the devil to get here.

2 CHAINZ'S ENTIRE GETUP

GETTYIMAGES

Thank you, sir, for bringing as many layers of excess to this situation as possible. We also enjoy that you went simple with the head and jeans to make your other gold/yellow/rainbow of awesome elements pop even more.

KENDALL JENNER'S NECKLACE

Wait a sec, this time we actually DO have insider information about where you can buy this over-the-top piece of awesomeness. It's called the Falkor, it's made by a designer called Dylaniex and it retails for $980. We do not, however, have any idea how much it weighs, but would guess in the neighborhood of 18 pounds.

There comes a time just once a year when things just have to stop...

A time to be with family, not to run around and shop! Thanksgiving Day is that time to gather round a table...to hug and laugh and eat, eat, eat...until you aren't able.

Thanksgiving Day Forman Mills is closed...On Friday we'll be back.

So all our friends and families can enjoy, and for one day relax.

Happy Thanksgiving from all of us at ... Forman Mills!!!!

WANT MORE DIRT?

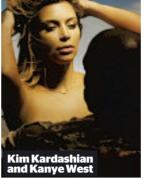

And what I learned was, you have to use tongues even if you're not a lesbian."

That's how many seconds it took for the Monty Python reunion show to sell out, CNN reports. Four more appearances were then added at London's O2 arena, and some tickets cost as little as $51, which is a damn ridiculous deal

THE DIGIT

-Emma Thompson, to The Hollywood Reporter, on kissing Meryl Streep. The interview with top awards-season actresses also was peppered with more wonderful quotes from Thompson about "muff shots."

ALL DOGS GO TO When a real-life dog gets hit by a car and dies, it's devastating. When Brian was hit by a car and died on Sunday's episode of "Family Guy," it spawned an infinite number of WTFs. Executive producer Steve Callaghan told eonline.com that killing off the Griffin family dog and bringing in a "Sopranos"-style replacement was "a fun way to shake things up." Clearly, this

2-GETHE

Step back, Kim Kardashian and Kanve West: You've got some video competition. Seth Rogen and James Franco, respectively (but not respectfully), played the duo in a shotby-shot parody of Yeezy's "Bound 2" video. A few differences: Rogen was allowed to keep his nipples (and his back hair) for this version.

All hail King Joffrey!

Wait, we like this guy now? Maybe. "Game of Thrones" star Jack Gleeson told the Irish Independent that he's quitting acting once his role as King Joffrey is over to focus on humanitarianism. "The lifestyle that comes with being an actor in a successful TV show isn't something I gravitate towards," he said. OK, yeah, that throne did look pretty uncomfortable.
